Art Of Flying: The Golden Decades Of Private Air Travel (Legends)

Synopsis

Beginning with the jet age of the 1940s and 1950s, air travel has been at the forefront of technology, culture, and luxury. The Art of Flying explores its fascinating evolution, curating a vibrant cultural history from the mid- twentieth century to the present. From technological developments such as pressurized cabins and the Concorde to the flair of custom crew uniforms by renowned designers including Dior, Emilio Pucci, and Moncler, as well as its interplay with architecture and art, air travel throughout history is at once a reflection of its time and a symbol of the cutting edge. In partnership with VistaJet and lavishly illustrated with over seven decades of imagery, The Art of Flying celebrates the golden past and the dream of luxury air travel today.

Have you ever put off buying a book that at the time you could get for a fairly reasonable price, only to find out a year later, that there are only 8 copies left on , and the price has dramatically skyrocketed ? This is a very elegant book from Assouline, with a nice large format, certainly up to the usual Assouline high quality standards. I was so impressed with this volume on private art travel, that I grabbed it. It is very sumptuous and there is so much to see here! I would strongly suggest spending $100 or so now, because I have a gut feeling "The Art of Flying" will become quite scarce in the near future. For example I procrastinated whether to buy the gorgeous book "French Riviera in the 1920s" also by Assouline, for well over a year, and now that book is OOP and looking recently I see that book is available starting around 1K on !!!

Great selection of photos here of the glamour of flying, except for the typo on p148. I believe that is Tina Hudson as Bianca, not Maud Adams.
